Dear Colleagues and Guests:

Welcome to the NAAG Winter Meeting. This annual gathering in Washington, D.C. allows attorneys general to meet with federal officials and others to discuss prevailing legal issues. I want to thank the AG Meeting Planning Committee for their time and effort in determining an outstanding agenda.

FBI Director James Comey is speaking to us for the first time, and CFPB Director Richard Cordray, former Ohio attorney general, is returning. Former U.S. Solicitors General Ted Olson and Walter Dellinger are back with their sought-after insights on U.S. Supreme Court cases. We have also planned a leading-edge discussion about how state and federal officials view drone regulation.

My one-year presidential initiative is focused on ‘protecting our digital lives.’ During this meeting, we will address cyber-hacking of corporate databases, a problem every attorney general has worked on to try and protect consumers.

Please enjoy the city while you are in town. Georgetown is within walking or running distance of the hotel, and there are plenty of options for shopping and dining. The U.S. Supreme Court—a magnificent building that reminds us of our nation’s legal history—is where our Tuesday evening NAAG reception takes place. If you go to the Hill to meet with your congressional delegation, you will notice the U.S. Capitol renovation underway.

I look forward to seeing you in our NAAG sessions as well as enjoying those informal opportunities to network.

Sincerely,

Jim Hood
NAAG President and Mississippi Attorney General
